Mayor's Foreword

Darebin City Council is proud to present the Darebin Human Rights Action Plan 2012–2015.

The City of Darebin is a large municipality in Melbourne's inner north with an estimated residential population of 143,057 people. Darebin is recognised as an important area of Aboriginal history and the original inhabitants of Darebin are the Wurundjeri people.

This new initiative articulates Council's strategic commitment and sets out actions which further embed human rights within Council's culture and practice at all levels, and ensures Council's legal responsibilities with the Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006. The Plan also includes actions which commit Council to working with citizens and communities to strengthen relationships with, between and within communities based on the key values of human rights—Freedom, Respect, Equality and Dignity.

The Darebin Human Rights Action Plan is one of a number of plans developed under the Equity and Inclusion Policy 2012–2015, all of which are underpinned by a strong human rights-based approach. This is the first Human Rights Action Plan for Darebin Council and as such, some of the actions are developmental allowing for new partnerships and initiatives to be formed over the three-year period.

Darebin Council would like to sincerely thank the members of the Human Rights Action Plan Working Group, who contributed their expertise, time and effort towards developing and refining the Plan. The seventeen-member Working Group represented diverse voices from across Council, partner organisations and community members from Council's Community Advisory Committees and Reference groups.

Human rights matter in the lives of Darebin citizens and communities. The Darebin Human Rights Action Plan is Council's commitment to the actions we will take to protect, fulfil and promote the human rights of all citizens in the City of Darebin.

On behalf of Council, I would like to thank all individuals and groups who have contributed to shaping the Darebin Human Rights Action Plan, which ushers in a renewed partnership approach between Darebin City Council and the community it serves.

The Voices of Darebin—

Freedom, Respect, Equality and Dignity

The Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006 (Victorian Charter) contains twenty basic rights that promote and protect the values of Freedom, Respect, Equality and Dignity.

The Victorian Government, local councils and other public authorities must not knowingly be in breach of these rights and must always consider them when they create laws, develop policies and deliver their services.

During 2012, as part of Council's many public and community events, people were asked to consider and comment on the four values and to write what these values meant in their day-to-day lives.

The following statements, from some of the 300-plus contributions made by people in Darebin, have been selected to show that these values are important to community and based on lived experiences. Human rights can be sometimes critiqued for operating on rhetorical and generalised levels, with little practical meaning in people's lives. The voices of Darebin people on the meaning and significance of 'Freedom, Respect, Equality, Dignity' show otherwise and it is this contribution that has helped frame the Human Rights Action Plan.

“Respect is something we all appreciate for ourselves and for others. It involves being listened to and being free to make our own decisions for our own lives, while recognising the affect it has on others.”

Policy Context

There are many intersecting policies and legislation at both the Federal and State government levels which impact on the Human Rights Action Plan. These have been presented and discussed in the Equity and Inclusion Policy as well as in other corresponding action plans.

National Context

Australian Human Rights Framework 2010

In 2010, the Federal Government launched Australia's Human Rights Framework. This occurred following Australia's most comprehensive community consultation process on human rights in 2009. Eighty-seven per cent of the submissions received during this consultation supported the introduction of a Federal Human Rights Act. Despite such overwhelming support for a more legally binding model, the Federal Government implemented an alternative model – the Australian Human Rights Framework.

The Framework outlines a range of key measures to protect and promote human rights in Australia and is based on five key principles:

- reaffirming a commitment to our human rights obligations
- the importance of human rights education
- enhancing our domestic and international engagement of human rights issues
- improving human rights protections including greater parliamentary scrutiny
- achieving greater respect for human rights principles within the community

Australia's Human Rights Action Plan 2012

A 2011 baseline study on key human rights issues in Australia informed the development of the Exposure Draft National Human Rights Action Plan. The study found that particular human rights issues persist for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, women, children, older people, gay, lesbian, bisexual and sex or gender-diverse people, people at risk of or experiencing homelessness, people with a disability, carers, people in prison, refugees, asylum seekers, migrants and people from culturally, linguistically and religiously diverse backgrounds. These groups correspond (except for people in prison) with the priority groups experiencing exclusion identified in Darebin's Equity and Inclusion Policy.

The Action Plan reflects what governments are already doing to address human rights concerns, including the areas of counter terrorism, access to justice, worker rights, poverty and climate change. The Action Plan also reinforces the commitment of government to the human rights of disadvantaged groups, including Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, older people and people with a disability.

Victorian context

The Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006

In 2006, Victoria became the first Australian state to enact a Charter of Human Rights following extensive public consultation. The consultation demonstrated very strong support for the legal protection of human rights with over 94% of submissions supporting the enactment of the Charter.

The Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006 entered into full force on 1st January 2008 and enshrines 20 civil and political rights which are mostly derived from the International Covenant of Civil and Political Rights.

The Victorian Charter requires public authorities, such as Victorian State and local governments, and people delivering services on behalf of government, to act consistently with the human rights in the Charter. Under section 38 of the Charter, it is unlawful for a public authority to act in a way that is incompatible with human rights, or to fail to give proper consideration to relevant human rights when making decisions.

This is the main legislative context specific to the Darebin Human Rights Action Plan.

In 2011, a review of the Victorian Charter was held by the Victorian Parliament's Scrutiny of Acts and Regulations Committee. More than 3800 public submissions were made to the review, including one by Darebin City Council. Ninety-five per cent of submissions supported retaining and/or strengthening the Charter.

Key state-wide human rights advocacy organisations¹ have collated case studies which have shown the positive and effective changes the Victorian Charter has enabled, including a crucial preventative role in deterring human rights breaches (and the associated social and economic costs).

Darebin City Council Policy Context

Darebin Equity and Inclusion Policy 2012–2015

The Darebin Equity and Inclusion Policy 2012–2015 provides an overarching framework for the Darebin Human Rights Action Plan with the three goals of the Equity and Inclusion Policy corresponding with human rights objectives and strategic action areas in the plan.

1. Equity and inclusion goal: to build an organisation that is inclusive and reflective of Darebin's diverse communities

Human rights objective:

To ensure that Darebin City Council (Council) acts in ways that are compatible with human rights in all decisions which affect Darebin communities

Human rights organisational action areas:

- » integrate the Darebin Human Rights Charter Check in decision-making processes across all levels of Council
- » build and strengthen capacities across all levels of Council to plan, develop, provide services and advocate for the human rights of Darebin citizens and communities
- » develop and strengthen partnerships to advocate for human rights priorities with and for communities experiencing poverty and discrimination
- » leadership and coordination across Council for human rights compliance and advocacy

2. Equity and inclusion goal: to build services and programs that are inclusive, responsive, accessible and equitable and which respond to the diversity of needs, rights and priorities of Darebin's communities

Human rights objective:

To integrate human rights practice within Council's service and program developments and delivery

Human rights service and program action areas:

- » community engagement – citizen and community's rights to be involved in decisions that affect them
- » freedom from discrimination
- » children's and family rights – supporting inter-generational relations
- » advocacy

3. Equity and inclusion goal: to contribute to building inclusive and empowered communities

Human rights objectives:

- » to strengthen community capacity to implement human rights values and laws for advocating dignified treatment and equal access to services for all.
- » to reinforce community relationships based on the human rights values of Freedom, Respect, Equality and Dignity.

Human rights community action areas:

- » acknowledge and respect First Australians
- » communicate and affirm human rights for all people—Darebin's Voices for Freedom, Respect, Equality and Dignity
- » affirm and build on community commitment and capacity on human rights

Some of the actions included in the plan, especially those under the first goal (which focuses on building an inclusive organisation) are actions that are necessary to ensure Council's legal responsibilities with the Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006. But compliance is only one of the reasons for the Human Rights Action Plan. Council is committed to strengthening its own internal organisational culture and ways of working that further respect and embed human rights values.

Darebin Anti-Racism Strategy 2012–2015

A key document informing the Darebin Human Rights Action Plan is the Darebin Anti-Racism Strategy 2012–2015. This local strategy sets the vision for a racism-free Darebin, where our community's diversity is valued, celebrated, respected, embraced and leveraged.

Informing the directions set out in the Anti-Racism Strategy was the Darebin Racism Inquiry which found, in keeping with previous studies at the national or state levels, that those most likely to experience race-based discrimination are:

- Aboriginal Australians and
- those from culturally and linguistically diverse (CALD) communities.
- refugees or migrants from newly-arrived communities (notably from Africa).

For these groups, the experience of race-based discrimination is constant and relentless racism: racism is part of everyday life.

The following principles, informed by Darebin citizens' views in the Racism Inquiry and reflecting their expectations, support the Anti-Racism Strategy and are applicable to the relevant actions set out in the Aboriginal Action Plan:

- take a stand against racism and as a Council, promote zero tolerance towards racism
- Darebin City Council acknowledges the Wurundjeri people as the traditional owners of the land and respects and recognises Aboriginal communities' values, living culture and practices, including their continuing spiritual connection to the land and their right to self-determination
- celebrate all of Darebin's diverse cultures; value diversity at all levels of the community and institutions and promote dialogue between different cultures through interculturalism
- work from a human rights perspective
- work in partnership with the community to address racism:
 - » Council should be accountable to the community and committed to tackling racism
 - » anti-racism initiatives should be developed ideally within a collaborative approach (as defined in Council's Community Engagement Framework)
- base all activities and initiatives on evidence and best practice, which implies keeping up-to-date with research and the growing evidence-base and reviewing our actions in that light
- empower the community and build its capacity to respond to racism
- recognise that "integration is a two-way street" and work with established communities to be more welcoming of new arrivals
- build a Council reflective of its community diversity

As such, an integrated approach has been adopted across the Aboriginal, Multicultural and Human Rights Action Plans to ensure coordinated responses of actions identified in the Anti-Racism Strategy.

Recognising the First Peoples of Australia

An important starting point to DHRAP is a clear recognition of Aboriginal people as the First Peoples of Australia. This recognition includes acknowledgement of the historical dispossession of Aboriginal people of their land, culture and identity, which has led to their entrenched exclusion and disadvantage.

Darebin's Racism Inquiry 2012 found that for Aboriginal members of the community in Darebin (and for newly arrived people, notably from Africa), racism is a constant and relentless part of everyday life.

In the Community Guide to the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, produced by the Australian Human Rights Commission (2010)², Mick Dodson, one of the key Aboriginal advocates who has worked at the international level for the past 20 years towards the development of the UN Declaration, states:

“The existence of human rights standards is not the source of indigenous disadvantage. Human rights do not dispossess Indigenous peoples, they do not marginalise them, they do not cause their poverty, and they do not cause gaps in life expectancy and life outcomes. It is the denial of rights that is a large contributor to these things. The value of human rights is not in their existence; it is in their implementation...”

This is a challenge for all of Council's work in addressing the racism and human rights breaches experienced by Aboriginal people.

Council understands and is committed to working in collaboration with Aboriginal people, both individually and with their organisations in ways that affirm and reinforce self-determination and community-control principles.

All actions in the DHRAP which pertain to learning and development on human rights (whether professional development within Council, or with communities), integrate acknowledgement and respect of the First People of Australia and the continuing strengths and contributions of Aboriginal culture and innovation. The DHRAP also acknowledges the ongoing embedded racism that Aboriginal people experience. Finally, the process of engagement for the DHRAP identified areas of work with young Aboriginal men and women that have now been integrated into the Darebin Aboriginal Action Plan.

Developing the Human Rights Action Plan

A diverse range of community engagement and learning activities were carried out during 2012 to inform the Plan.

These activities included:

Freedom, Respect, Equality, Dignity – What do they mean in your day-to-day lives in Darebin?

In early 2012, through an educational and consultative process, people attending various community and public events in Darebin were invited to reflect and contribute to the meanings of the four values underpinning the Victorian Charter. Over 300 people across Darebin contributed their voices at the following events:

- Darebin Kite Festival, February 2012
- Darebin Council Leadership group, March 2012
- Sundays in April Program, including the Koorie Pride Festival, April 2012
- Standing up for your human rights in our everyday lives and relationships — Darebin City Council, Northern Interfaith Intercultural Network, Islamic Society of Victoria forum, April 2012
- International Day Against Homophobia — Darebin City Council community engagement and celebration, May 2012
- Darebin Intercultural Cup (part of the Reaching Out–Salaam Alaykum Project), June 2012
- Darebin Human Rights Action Plan Working Group, September 2012

Human Rights Films and Community Conversations

During 2012, five human rights films were shown and community conversations facilitated. The sessions were themed around groups and communities who experience exclusion, discrimination and poverty, covering the experience of the following groups:

- women (especially women's experience of war and peace building)
- Aboriginal people (with a focus on the Northern Territory Intervention)
- asylum seekers (the personal story of one of the SIEV-Ex survivors in 2001. This person was also involved in other Darebin community events)
- young people (including young people with disabilities and young people whose parents/carers are gay, lesbian and transgender)
- older people (including stories of elder abuse)

The program, attended by over 70 people, provided a deliberative platform for reflection and discussion between participants and development of recommendations to inform the Plan.

Darebin Human Rights Action Plan Working Group

The Working Group was established to provide critical reflection and contribution to the final development of the Plan.

The role of the Working Group was to:

- » provide critical reflection on the themes and ideas which have been discussed through community learning and engagement processes
- » contribute to ongoing decisions which need to be made as part of the final draft of the Plan
- » learn/be informed of the strengths and the limitations of the Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities (2006) as a frame of reference for the Plan
- » provide a diverse platform of people with different experiences of Council and communities as a process for good collaborative planning

The Working Group consisted of 17 people:

- five Council Staff across different programs and areas, including Community Planning, Partnerships and Performance, Communications and Marketing, Aged and Disability Services, Public Realm, Family and Children's Services and City Development/Planning
- five representatives from diverse organisations who work in partnership with Darebin City Council, including Spectrum Migrant Resource Centre, Salvation Army, Leadership Plus, Darebin Community Health and Victorian Aboriginal Legal Service
- Seven community members from Council Community Advisory Committees and Reference Groups including representatives from the Darebin Women's Advisory Committee, Darebin Sexuality, Sex and Gender Diverse Committee, Darebin Ethnic Communities' Council, Darebin Interfaith Council and Darebin Healthy and Active Ageing Board. A separate process of engagement was undertaken with the Darebin Disability Advisory Committee as they were unable to participate in the working group.

This Working Group reflected on the key human rights priorities captured through the engagement process, prioritised key areas for inclusion and provided critical feedback to the draft Plan.

Darebin Human Rights Charter Check

The Darebin Human Rights Charter Check (Charter Check) is an internal guideline for staff and management across Council to address when developing policies, laws, procedures, services and all decisions which have an impact on citizens and communities. Active since 2011, the Charter Check ensures that the human rights of people affected have been respectfully considered, and that the Council has complied with the Victorian Charter.

The Charter Check ensures that the three key elements in Council's obligations under the Charter are followed. These three elements are:

1. Council must give 'proper consideration' to human rights when making decisions—that is, no blanket or inflexible rules, but real, genuine and proportionate consideration
2. Council must act compatibly with human rights – this means treating people as individuals and according to their needs and rights
3. Council must interpret and apply laws compatible with human rights – this requires active consideration and a sincere attempt to comply with human rights

The Charter Check integrates all these considerations in a coherent and clear process and has been integrated into Council's Equity and Inclusion Planning and Audit Tool (EIPAT) as one of the key pillars for consideration in development of Council policies, programs and services.

 Council must give 'proper consideration' to human rights when making decisions—that is, no blanket or inflexible rules, but real, genuine and proportionate consideration

 Council must act compatibly with human rights—this means treating people as individuals and according to their needs and rights

 Council must interpret and apply laws compatible with human rights—this requires active consideration and a sincere attempt to comply with human rights

Further details about the Charter Check are in Appendix 1.

Darebin Community Engagement Framework 2012–2017

One of the key human rights priorities identified during the engagement and planning processes for the development of the Human Rights Action Plan was the importance of communities having a voice and being able to influence decisions made by Council.

The Darebin Community Engagement Framework affirms that one of the key objectives of effective community engagement is to uphold the democratic rights of citizens and communities to be part of decision making in matters that affect them.

It outlines three approaches—Consultation, Deliberation and Collaboration—each signifying different levels of influence and decision-making capacity between communities, other stakeholders and Council. Seven standards informed each of the three approaches.

The framework encourages and strengthens the contribution and role of citizens and communities in the ongoing decisions with regard to often complex social, political, economic, cultural and environmental matters affecting people's circumstances and lays out clear guidelines and standards across all levels of operation.

The meanings of these three engagement approaches and the seven standards and commitments which Council makes to these standards are included in Appendix 2.

Freedom from Discrimination

Recognising Integrated Approaches and Existing Plans

Council has a wide range of existing plans and legislative requirements that reflect and reinforce the interdependence and mutuality of human rights. Many of these plans, listed below, recognise and address discrimination, a strong theme of the Darebin Human Rights Action Plan.

This includes freedom from racism, freedom from age discrimination, freedom from sex discrimination and freedom from discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity. This theme emerged as a priority issue during the engagement process in the development of the Plan.

In terms of Council's own programs and services, freedom from discrimination means ensuring equality and equity of access and participation. Access to Council services and programs and anti-discrimination measures have not been specifically defined as an action area in the Human Rights Action Plan as they are covered in other plans and through legislative requirements such as:

- Disability Access and Inclusion Plan 2009–2013
- Darebin Community Health and Wellbeing Plan 2009–2013
- Darebin Food Security Policy 2010–2014
- Darebin Responding to Housing Stress: A local Action Plan 2010–2013
- Darebin Active and Healthy Ageing Strategy 2011–2021
- Darebin Community Safety Strategy 2012–2016

Plans cascading from the Equity and Inclusion Policy 2012–2015

- Women's Equity Strategy 2012–2015
- Gender Equity Annual Action Plan 2012–2013
- Preventing Violence Against Women Annual Action Plan 2012–2013
- Anti-Racism Strategy 2012–2015
- Aboriginal Action Plan 2012–2015
- Multicultural Action Plan 2012–2015
- Sexuality, Sex and Gender Diversity Action Plan 2012–2015

Related actions in the Aboriginal and Multicultural Action Plans

- national 'Racism — it stops with me' campaign
- intercultural dialogue and relationship building between Aboriginal people and culturally diverse communities
- commemoration and celebration of significant annual events with a focus on Cultural Diversity Week and National Aboriginal and Islanders Day Observance Committee Week
- engaging with Darebin Council Community Advisory Committees to integrate actions on prevention of violence against women
- strengthening strategic networks and relationships to foster stronger connection and engagement between Council and women in the community

There are also specific priorities which arose from the research and community engagement undertaken in the development of the Human Rights Action Plan:

- freedom from racism — the experience of young Aboriginal people leaving the justice system
- freedom from racism — the experience of young Aboriginal peoples in groups, including in public areas
- freedom from racism — the experience of young Muslim women and men

These three areas have been included in the Aboriginal and Multicultural Action Plans respectively.

Reflective and Participatory Monitoring and Evaluation

This is Darebin's first Human Rights Action Plan. There are some key actions that are developmental. Some of the measures included in the plan are specific outputs — things that Council will do. Some of the measures leave the opportunities open for ongoing development and change, especially in new initiatives which require ongoing partnerships with communities.

As stated in the Equity and Inclusion Policy, Council is committed to reflective practice as integral to its ongoing monitoring and evaluation.

The key questions that are useful for ongoing reflective evaluation are:

- Are we going in the direction we thought we would be?
- Do we need to do something different?
- Have circumstances changed?
- Have relationships changed?
- What have we learned?
- What do we need to do to strengthen/change how and what we are implementing?

The Human Rights Action Plan will use these questions as an ongoing reference for monitoring and evaluation internally, with organisational partners and with citizens and communities. Annual reporting requirements will also ensure accountability back to Council and community.

Spotlight on Three Areas for Action

The following section details three areas of action included in the Plan: professional development for Council staff, Darebin's advocacy priorities and freedom from discrimination.

Three areas for action!

1. Organisational development
2. Advocacy
3. Freedom from discrimination

1

Organisational development

Council's professional development on human rights will include the following aspects:

- Council obligations under the Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities Act 2006
- applying human rights to decisions and practices across Council
- freedom from discrimination and racism as a key human rights theme, with a focus on Aboriginal people and the experiences of African and Muslim communities
- using human rights to balance between different priorities and interests within and between communities
- using human rights as a tool to support communities to be strong advocates for themselves in relation to public authorities, including Darebin City Council

Advocacy

The following human rights priorities were identified during community engagement in the development of the Human Rights Action Plan. Some of these priorities are actions in other strategies and plans. They are listed here to ensure transparency, coordination and follow-up:

- Human rights and freedom of expression
- Human rights, equality and racism — Australia's first people
- Human rights and standing up for others — witnessing racism
- Human rights of children and parents — strengthening intergenerational relations
- The human rights of asylum seekers — local actions for national change

Accessible, affordable housing

- affordable, accessible and secure housing for women and men in housing stress or homeless
- accessible and affordable housing with a focus on new private — housing developments
- affordable and accessible housing alternatives for older women and men

Work opportunities and workplace rights

- employment opportunities for young Aboriginal men and women
- employment opportunities and work place rights for newly arrived migrants and refugees

Inclusion of young people with disabilities

- supporting young women and men with disabilities in their transition from education to employment
- fair inclusion of children with disabilities in mainstream schools

'Equality means people are respected and treated with dignity irrespective of their race, creed, sexuality, religion, political beliefs, gender, age, physical or intellectual ability. Also irrespective of whether they barrack for Collingwood or not!'

Male, 49 (International Day against Homophobia)

Freedom from discrimination— making connections

Council programs which address freedom from discrimination will make connections between people's different experiences of discrimination and affirm diversity as essential to human experience.

Freedom from discrimination in Darebin begins with:

- recognition and respect for all human diversity and preciousness of all people
- acknowledgement and respect of the First People of Australia and continuing strengths of Aboriginal culture and innovation

Freedom from discrimination then continues to affirm diversity as an important feature of humanity, including recognition and affirmation of:

- cultural diversity;
- sexual, sex and gender diversity
- diversity in abilities

Appendices

Appendix 1: Charter Check

Council (like all other public authorities) may limit rights in certain circumstances, but this must be reasonable, necessary, justified and proportionate (section 7(2) of the Act).

This Charter Check ensures that:

- the nature and underlying values of the right have been considered; and
- the limitation has an important purpose and we have material evidence which supports this; and
- the restriction is proportionate to the objective we are trying to achieve (in other words, we're not using a sledgehammer to crack a walnut); and
- the limitation falls within the range of reasonable solutions to the problem (or are there less restrictive means that will achieve the purpose of the limitation?); and
- the balance between the right and its limitation accords with the values of a free and democratic society.

Financial considerations alone do not provide sufficient grounds for limitation of rights.

Appendix 2: Darebin Community Engagement Framework 2012–2017

Darebin City Council's framework includes three distinct approaches to community engagement: Consultation – Deliberation – Collaboration

Each of these approaches offers Council, communities and other stakeholders' different relationships, roles, levels of influence, and decision-making capacity in the engagement process.

Consultation

Consultation is a communication process whereby Council gathers the views, opinions and experiences of diverse citizens and community stakeholders. Council then deliberates over these views, along with other relevant material and evidence, before arriving at its own official view on an issue. Council then makes recommendations for actions and, when relevant, makes decisions for implementation of these actions. It commits to informing community and other stakeholders of how their feedback was used and how it influenced outcomes.

Deliberation

Deliberation is more than asking communities for their views. It is a two-way process of learning and exchange involving communities and Council, where considered views and joint outcomes can be developed. It involves providing communities with information and sufficient time to discuss an issue in depth and to engage with one another. Deliberation provides people with credible and alternative information, which enables them to understand the benefits and trade-offs between various options. Deliberation also provides structured dialogue, to help people clarify their values and priorities, reframe issues, discuss alternatives, express informed preferences, and arrive at solutions. Recommendations are made to Council for genuine integration into its decisions.

Collaboration

Collaboration means shared decision making between Council and communities, and mutually defined areas of responsibility and action.

In collaboration, Council and communities are equal partners in the on-going processes of decision making, including learning, reflection, discussion, weighing up competing priorities and goals, developing alternatives, deciding, identifying respective roles, achieving common goals, and carrying out actions according to decisions made together

In this new framework, consultation is Darebin City Council's minimum approach to engagement. However, Council is committed to using more deliberative and collaborative approaches to working through complex matters and issues facing communities.

Council has developed seven standards which underpin the framework for community engagement. The standards are a point of reference and practice for all three approaches.

Seven standards for effective and equitable engagement:

1. Equity, inclusion, and human rights

We will proactively work with diverse communities and remove barriers to participation so that people can have an equal voice on matters of importance to them.

2. Clear purpose and appropriate processes

Every time we engage we will ensure that the purpose of our engagement is clear, and we will make sure the approach we use is the right match for the issue and decision required.

3. Transparency and accountability

We will be open with communities about the level of influence they can exercise on overall outcomes. We will clearly explain how their feedback will be used, how their feedback was considered, what decisions were made as a result, and by whom.

4. Accurate, accessible, and timely information

When we engage with communities we will ensure that information about issues is readily available and accessible to all people. We will actively identify and remove barriers to information.

5. Commitment to learning from each other

We will value all participants' knowledge and expertise and we will continually improve our engagement processes. We will share the things we learn from our mutual engagement with the wider community and stakeholders.

6. Respectful, supportive, and empowering

We will work towards empowering communities by providing engagement opportunities with a real mandate to effect change. We will ensure that all participants are treated with dignity and respect.

7. Adequate time and finances; committed and skilful people

We will plan, resource, and report on our engagement processes properly. We will not rush or cut corners at the expense of valuable community contributions and we will develop our staff to undertake best practice community engagement.

Darebin Human Rights Action Plan

Darebin City Council has developed a plan that ensures Council gives proper consideration to people's human rights when developing and delivering policies, laws, programs and services. The three year plan also includes actions to support communities to use the Victorian Charter of Human Rights and Responsibilities (2006).
